'Grief comes from voters who feel cheated'

By Dennis M. Dela Cruz

THE GRIEF expressed by voters who feel cheated is a natural reaction to the results of the recent election. Many voters feel that the results do not reflect the true will of the people, and this has led to a sense of disappointment and anger.

The sense of being cheated is a common theme in the current political climate. Many voters feel that the government has not been transparent or honest in its dealings with the public. This has led to a loss of trust and a sense of betrayal.

Bank lending up 3.6% to P1.5T in Oct

By Rene C. Reyes

Bank lending in the Philippines grew by 3.6 percent in October, reaching a total of P1.5 trillion. This growth is a positive indicator for the country's financial sector, suggesting that businesses and individuals are confident in the economy and are willing to borrow money.

The increase in lending is primarily driven by the banking sector, which has seen a steady rise in new loan applications. This is a reflection of the growing demand for credit, particularly in the real estate and infrastructure sectors.

The growth in lending is also a result of the government's efforts to stimulate the economy. By providing favorable policies and incentives, the government has encouraged banks to lend more, which has helped to support the overall economic recovery.
